

NMTCB REPORT

Jacqueline A. Bridges, CNMT
Chairperson

The NMTCB welcomes James E. Greene, Jr., PhD as the new executive director effective September 1, 1991. The selection of Dr. Greene followed a national search lasting several months during which 25 candidates for this important post were considered. The board of directors is extremely pleased to have secured a highly qualified and experienced administrator to direct the Atlanta office and spearhead NMTCB's continued growth and progress.

Dr. Greene (who prefers to be called Jim) joined NMTCB from his former position as a senior administrator and faculty member at Georgia State University, serving most recently as university registrar. Jim is an internationally recognized pioneer and authority in the development and application of new computer technology to academic and administrative functions. His development of a computer voice-response telephone registration system won two national awards for educational innovation and excellence and has revolutionized the way that many institutions now register students for classes.

Jim is an active member of a number of professional organizations at the national, regional, and state level and he has served in a variety of leadership roles in these organizations. He is a frequent speaker and presenter at professional meetings and has served as program chair for several national conferences and workshops.

Commenting on his appointment, Jim stated, "I am extremely pleased and fortunate to be affiliated with the NMTCB. I look forward to learning more about the profession and to working with the board of directors to improve communications and services provided by the NMTCB office. Please feel free to let us know how we may be of assistance to you."

Jim and his wife Susan, who supervises computer center operations at Georgia State University, are longtime residents of Atlanta. Jim has two daughters, Jennifer, a first-year law student, and Margaret, a junior in college. Jim tells me his hobby is metal working and that he is a home shop machinist.

Already hard at work on the Task Analysis Survey and the certification examination process, Jim recently conferred with ACT officials to move these important projects forward. From his running start, it appears that Jim will be a creative, energetic, and effective executive director.
