

based on the specific needs of the NMTCB Board of Directors.

Every year, the NMTCB has one or more technologist directors whose term is ending, and we seek applications from candidates interested in filling these vacancies. If you are a certified nuclear medicine technologist and are interested in serving on the board, please see our Web site at www.nmtcb.org/resources/directorApp.php for more information and to access our application and conflict-of-interest policy. The next application deadline is August 15, 2010. Replacing April and Danny are 2 new directors elected to the board at the fall 2009 meeting. Angela Foster is a certified nuclear medicine technologist from the Omaha, Nebraska, area and brings several years of experience and a lot of enthusiasm to this position. Nancy McDonald DeLoatch is from Jacksonville, Florida. She has been active in the nuclear medicine community for a long time and is among the first technologists to become NCT-certified. We welcome both of them and look forward to their successful future with the NMTCB.

Should you have any questions about the NMTCB or any of our certification programs, please feel free to contact us through our Web site at www.nmtcb.org/about/contact.php or our e-mail address at board@nmtcb.org.

David Perry, CNMT, PET

Executive Director

Nuclear Medicine Technology

Certification Board

Erratum

In the December 2009 issue of the JNMT, Aaron Scott, BS, CNMT, of Buford, GA, winner of the 2009 SNMITS Outstanding Technologist Award, was incorrectly identified as working at Rockdale Medical Center since 2004. He has worked at Rockdale Medical Center since 2007. He also won the Bronze Star for service in Somalia.